SHEPHERD MURDER TRIAL STARTS

TRIAL OF HEIR OF MILLIONAIRE ORPHAN BEGINS

William Shepherd on Trial For Alleged Slaying of William McClintock, Foster Son

SIGNS OF BITTER CONTEST

State's Star Witness to Be Dr. Faiman who Admitted Teaching Use of Germs

(By Universal Service)

CHICAGO, May 18.—William Darling Shepherd went on trial today for the slaying of William Nelson McClintock, his foster son and whose testament bequeathed a million dollar estate to the defendant.

The detailed questioning of jurors at the very outset indicated that the state will ask the infliction of the death penalty on Shepherd.

Four men who "believed in hanging even on circumstantial evidence," had been tentatively chosen by the state, but one of these, L. F. Tuells, was excused by the defense before adjournment tonight. Tuells declared he had formed an opinion in the case.

"Have you any conscientious scruples against the infliction of the death penalty?"

That was the question that met each juror.

It was asked first of Leo Eitelson who answered with an affirmative and was waved aside by George Gorman, assistant state's attorney in charge of the prosecution of Shepherd.

"Could you set aside any opinion you may have and decide this case on the evidence and the law, pressed Mr. Gorman, as the next venireman was called.

"I could," came the answer. "Have you any conscientious scruples against infliction of the death penalty?"

The next venireman answered in the same affirmative.

"Then you would not be willing to inflict the death penalty?"

"No, I wouldn't."

That is the dialogue of the drama repeated over and over by the veniremen. Here and there a variation in the final answer, and the state's (Continued on Page 8)

Plans and specifications for the improvement of a portion of Norvell street were ordered prepared.

BERLIN, May 18. A red eruption of Bolshevism in various sections of Bulgaria is again reported in London dispatches from Sofia.

Communists together with radical farmers, have taken up arms again in Central and Eastern districts of the country. More than 2,000 government troops are mobilized against bands in those districts. In Kazanlik, a detachment of soldiers under communist influence are reported to be in mutiny.

Alleged plots have been discovered to blow up the Paris-Constantinople-Orient express. Soldiers have been placed aboard all passenger trains in the sections where the danger exists.

Governor Asked to Sign Water Bills For District Here

A resolution endorsing the bills pertaining to the Eastbay Municipal Utility district, passed at the last session of the California legislature, and asking Governor Richardson to give them his early consideration and signature, was adopted by the Richmond city council last night, on the request of the district officials.

Measures referred to are the acts establishing as legal the $39,000,000 bond issue for the Mokelumne river water project, clarifying and validating these bonds and making it legal to condemn rights of way for the water project. If the bills are not signed by Governor Richardson before midnight of May 29, they will become automatically dead, it was pointed out.

Hearing Resumed On Motor Stages Through Richmond

(By Universal Service)

By official vote last night the Richmond city council ratified its action taken unofficially Thursday night in withdrawing its support of the fight of the San Francisco Sierra Motor Coach company before the state railroad commission for a permit of public necessity and convenience through Richmond and Contra Costa county, and leaving the railroad commission free to act without any recommendation from the council.

Hearing on the application of the motor coach company for a permit to operate a Yosemite-San Francisco stage line by way of Richmond and Contra Costa county was resumed yesterday before the railroad commission in San Francisco. The company has lost the support of the city council by the withdrawal of the resolution it had passed urging favorable action by the railroad of the company's application.

The resolution was rescinded after employees of the Santa Fe railroad had complained that the granting of a bus franchise would cause the railroad to remove two of their trains and jeopardize their positions. A similar application from another concern to operate a freight and passenger bus line from Sacramento to San Francisco, by way of Antioch, the Tunnel Road and Oakland, will be heard by the commission in Antioch, May 28.

Lathrop's Recovery Now Thought Certain

After a conference with Dr. Tranter last evening, Fire Chief W. P. Cooper announced that the condition of Captain John F. Lathrop, member of the fire department, is greatly improved. Dr. Tranter stated that Lathrop is improving constantly and there is very little doubt of his recovery. He also stated that although his patient has been semi-conscious a number of times, he has never been rational since he was struck by a street car last week. He is not yet able to recognize friends or relatives.

WOMAN DRIVES INTO AUTO

A Ford automobile owned by Dave Gibson, 167 Sixth street was struck by a Willys-Knight driven by an unidentified woman at Fifteenth and Macdonald avenue last night, according to police report. Gibson declared that the woman drove on after the accident without ascertaining whether or not he was hurt or how much damage had been done.

LIVING COST IS GOING UP

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, May 18. The cost of living, particularly of foodstuffs is going up again. The United States may be more prosperous now than a year ago, but at the same time, everything costs more, according to figures announced by the department of labor today. These show an increase of 5.2 per cent on all food prices between March 15, 1924 and March 15, 1925.

This higher cost of food is particularly true of the chief staples which form the diet of the working classes. Bread rose from 8.7 cents a pound to 9.4 cents during the year. Flour rose from 4.7 cents a pound to 6.4 cents, and cornmeal from 4.4 cents to 5.5 cents.

Round steak, which is perhaps the most widely used of all beef cuts, increased from 31.5 cents to 33.6 cents, while ham went from 43.6 cents to 51.2 cents.

Butter was one of the few commodities that decreased, dropping from 58 cents a pound to 55.5 cents. Lard, however, rose from 17.5 cents to 23.1 cents, while eggs jumped from 34.8 cents a dozen to 39.1 cents. Granulated sugar decreased, falling from 19.4 cents to 17.7 cents.

Wharf Plans Now In Preparation

Plans for Municipal Wharf No. 2, to be located on the Richmond inner harbor, are now under preparation, it was announced at the city council last night by City Manager McVittie. They will be presented to the council as soon as the elevation has been determined. Standard wharf elevation, McVittie said, is 13 feet, but if a certain class of tonnage can be secured for the new wharf its elevation will be 11 feet, 5 inches. McVittie did not mention the class of tonnage referred to. Bids on the dredging will be opened next meeting night.

MACHINE GUNS INTENDED FOR CHINA SEIZED

Bares Plot to Ship Weapons Into Orient and Bring Dope to United States

GUNS ARE CONFISCATED

Contraband Found in Olive Oil Barrel on Liner Destined For Shanghai, China

(By Universal Service)

SAN FRANCISCO, May 19. Disclosure of a gigantic smuggling conspiracy, with a score of ramifications and with agents in the principal cities of the Pacific Coast among the Orient, was made by customs officials yesterday with the seizure of 15 machine guns which San Francisco members of the ring were attempting to send to China.

It is the belief of W. B. Hamilton, collector of customs, and of the inspectors who uncovered the plot, that the leaders of the ring were bringing narcotics into the United States and sending firearms back to China.

Seven machine guns were found in a barrel of olive oil consigned to Shanghai. They were seized and five customs inspectors detailed to watch the ship. A few moments later a Chinese drove up to the pier with baggage for an alleged stevedore passenger. Investigation revealed that eight more guns and 5,000 rounds of ammunition made up the "baggage." The ship was searched, but no such name as that to whom the guns were consigned could be located.

Various Street Work Projects Are Handled By Local Council

Four protests against improving McHyde avenue, between Twenty-ninth street and San Pablo, with anything other than Richmond Standard macadam, were received by the city council last night, from property owners at Port Breez, Richmond, Fresno and Bakersfield.

Other property owners met with the council Friday afternoon, at which time the Standard macadam was favored for the present work, and an agreement was reached to pave the street with 8 inches of Richmond Standard macadam at the present time, reserving the right to surface it with a permanent paving later.

This agreement was adopted by the council last night, with the understanding that the paving is not to be used until the property owners desire it at some future date. City Engineer Hoffman was directed to prepare the plans and specifications for the macadam paving on the street from Twenty-ninth and Garvin to San Pablo avenue.

WALLS ADDITION

Seven additional signatures were added to the petition before the council for the improvement of certain streets in the Walls addition with macadam base and asphalt concrete wearing surface. Plans and specifications for the streets had been prepared by City Engineer Hoffman and were adopted. A resolution of intention to do the work was also passed.

These streets include Beck street, between South and Wall; Thirty-fifth street, between Wall and Santa Fe railroad; Thirty-third street, between Wall and Ohio; Wall street, between Thirty-third and Thirty-fifth streets; Waller, Ohio, Center, and Florida avenues, between Thirty-third and Thirty-seventh streets.

TENTH STREET WORK

Contracts for the improvement of Tenth street, between Pennsylvania and Lucas avenues, was awarded to the Northern Paving company, the lowest bidder on contracts submitted last week. All property owners on the street had been interviewed by Engineer Hoffman and were willing to proceed with the work at an estimated cost of $7.15 per foot on the Lucas avenue end and $8.00 on the Pennsylvania avenue end, on a maximum charge of $118.26 for a 25-foot lot.

Assessments are lower on the Pennsylvania avenue end owing to the fact that the intersection has already been paid for, it was stated.

A resolution ordering work and calling for bids on Spring street and Johnson avenue, was adopted, no protests having been received. These bids will be opened in two weeks at the meeting night on June 1.

GARRARD BOULEVARD

The Santa Fe railroad has agreed with City Manager McVittie to have the improvement of Garrard boulevard done at private contract. McVittie stated, and the plans and specifications for this street were adopted by the council to be let at private contract.

The Santa Fe will follow the city's plans, using 4 inches of asphaltic concrete, 1 1-2 inches of Warren bitulithic, 1 1-2 inches National paving and 1 1-2 inches Oakland specification. McVittie stated, they will call for their own bids and award their own contract.

BICYCLE STOLEN

W. G. Mayer, 115 Macdonald, reported to the police last night that a boy's bicycle, valued at $30 was stolen from beside the Richmond theatre last week.

SLAYER SEEN LEAVING TRAIN NEAR MORAGA

Floyd Hall is Identified As One Of Pair That Murdered Sacramento Merchant

COUNTY OFFICERS ON WATCH

Fugitive Said to Have Disappeared In County Hills Last Sunday

With a report that Joe Tanko, fugitive San Quentin murderer, left a Sacramento Short Line train near Moraga Sunday and cut into the hills, Contra Costa officers today are on the lookout for the much sought slayer.

According to a report to Oakland police a man answering the description of Tanko conversed with several passengers on the train and exhibited nervousness when the Hall-Tanko case was discussed. He left the train hurriedly near Moraga and was seen to make his way into the hills.

The report was made by Samuel Hersh, 3187 Mission street, San Francisco, one of the men to whom "Tanko" talked Hersh said the man got on the train at Sacramento.

A score of reports were made to Oakland and San Francisco police yesterday that Tanko had been seen in the bay district but the report by Hersh was the only one in which any evidence was placed.

Pullman Center Park to Be Done by Engineer

City Manager A. J. McVittie and City Engineer E. A. Hoffmann, were instructed by the Richmond city council last night to prepare plans and specifications for the Pullman recreation center. This action was taken in lieu of the recommendation of the city park and playground commission that the firm of McRory and McLaren be authorized to prepare the plans for the sum of $60.

It was pointed out by Councilman Lane, and concurred in by other members, that the city could do this work, reserving the $60 to be used in park improvements to better advantage. Representatives of the Pullman P. T. A. were present and urged that the work be started immediately, and that they "be given the most for their money."

Park Supervisor Terrassy will be instructed to attend to the beginning of the work as quickly as possible. McVittie stated the plans could be laid out and work started on the playground, pending the securing of a street in the vicinity by the city.

A GREAT UNDERTAKING

The establishment of the Walter Hines Page School of International Relations at Johns Hopkins University is a sane and logical movement for the assurance of world peace backed by intelligence and an understanding of international problems.

"It is expected," says Dr. Frank J. Goodnow, president of Johns Hopkins, "that not only will the School itself through publication of its findings, make valuable contributions to existing knowledge of international relations, but that a trained body of investigators and teachers will be developed to carry on the work after they leave the school."

"With understanding will come release from the errors that give rise to unnecessary international friction and discord. As the motto of the Johns Hopkins University declares, veritas vos liberabit—the truth will set you free."

An endowment fund of $1,000,000 which is necessary to provide the income to maintain this school is now being raised. It is the desire of the founders of the institution to secure this money not from a few wealthy men but from thousands of American citizens who wish to record their views in favor of intelligence in preference to ignorance in the settlement of any great world problem.

A young lady who is a stenographer in an office at Riverside, California, in sending in a dollar to help raise the necessary funds, wrote to Owen D. Young, president of the Board of Trustees of the Endowment Fund, 120 Broadway, New York:

"Please accept my check for $1 as a contribution to the endowment fund of the Walter Hines Page School of International Relations. I cannot do less, but I wish that I could give more. I read your address on the Page School delivered at Johns Hopkins University. It came as a revelation to me, and I hope, from the bottom of my heart, that one million Americans will be similarly affected."

A million $1 subscriptions would be just about a million times more effective in establishing this school than one $1,000,000 subscription. We should follow the lead of the young lady of Riverside and become founders of an institution which is destined to play a leading part in world affairs.

GETTING THE MOST OUT OF ROADS

Practically every county in the United States has many miles of good rock macadam highways which have outlived their usefulness from the standpoint of carrying modern motor vehicle traffic. Thousands of dollars a mile have been spent in building and maintaining these old roads. To save this investment of the taxpayers is a duty which devolves upon county commissioners and boards of supervisors.

Instead of tearing up these roads, it has been successfully demonstrated in many states that they can be used as a base for a waterproof asphaltic concrete surface at a saving of from $6,000 to $10,000 a mile.

Extension of this type of road paving is saving taxpayers over the country millions of dollars and building hundreds of miles of hard surfaced highways which could not otherwise be paved.

WHERE DO WE SLEEP?

"Where do we sleep?" is the eternal question of the tourist. It is easy to get gas, to get water, to get oil, but what your automobilist wants to know is where he can spend the night. During the day it is alright to eat a roadside lunch and then hit the road again, but after the sun goes down practically every auto tourist is concerned with the question of a good hotel. Does he wait until he reaches a town before he decides to stop there? Not very often. He finds out where there are modern, distinctive hotel accommodations and lays his plans to reach that town. Richmond should get her share of these travelers. To do so we must advertise that we have new, fireproof hotel accommodations. Let us provide the hotel and the world will make a path to our door.

GOOD ADVICE

President-Elect Hindenburg says to Germany: "Get to work!" Finance Minister Caillaux says to France: "Cut expenses to the bone!"

Both see that their nations need to forget the luxury of hate and waste, and think only of the vital necessity of industrial regeneration.

The advice of these two Europeans is as valuable here in the United States; it is exactly what President Coolidge has emphasized from the first day of his presidency.

Farmers should take note of the decline in wheat prices, and plan their year's crop accordingly. The high prices of the year have stimulated producers to the point of over planting, so that it will undoubtedly mean loss for any one to hold high-priced wheat over the coming of the new and probably cheap crop. In consequence, the price had to break, to the dismay of armies of foolish speculators. An over-production is imminent, which will mean lower prices than wheat is actually worth.

Linon and Kaska are Combined in Smart Ensemble.

YOUR little boy or girl learn at school that one half of all the people in the world never wear any sort of clothes save those entirely made of cotton, and you yourself may be aware of the fact that the cultivation of flax and the making of linen dates from the dawn of civilization. They did it way back in the stone age and until about one hundred and fifty years ago linen making was a most important textile industry. Sheets and table cloths, napkins, and underwear—all the fabrics that we still call for from force of habit table linens, bed linens and body linens, really were linen. Now table linens are very often cotton bed linens are almost entirely so and the woman who still wears linen lingerie is the rare exception. She may wear underthings of cotton or silk, even of wool if she be very old-fashioned, but she is the rare exception if she wears them of linen.

Probably the word "robe" was along just about as well if there were no linen. We wouldn't like the feel of cotton napkins to begin with but we'd soon get used to them as we did in the war days. Folk engaged in the linen industry would be put out for a time but an adjustment would come and cotton would fill all the needs of linen as it does now fill almost all of them.

Because of comparative unimportance, no doubt, linen carries with it an air of distinction now that was not the case two hundred years ago. The linen frock is a prized possession in most women's wardrobes. Not only is linen more expensive than cotton but usually it requires greater attention. Many women wish that they could wear linen frocks all summer. But they must so easily, they say, that they would have to have one freshly pressed every day.

This spring the dress-makers have been making interesting experiments with linen, and sometimes they have combined kaska with it. The sketch shows an ensemble consisting of a gray linen frock buttoned in front and banded with navy blue linen. The unlined coat with which it is worn is of navy blue kaska, with pockets, collar and cuffs edged with the gray linen.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

By MARY MARSHALL

DRESS, GOWN, FROCK OR ROBE?

MOST persons call them "dresses." This is the term that has been usually adopted by the makers of this branch of apparel and the name is used by the retailers. "Ladies and Misses Dresses" is the direction the elevator man is taught to give—not "Ladies and Misses Frocks."

While this word "dress" is most usual there are some people who object to its use in this sense. Some persons always speak of "frocks," and others of "gowns."

Perhaps the chief objection to the term dress is that correctly it should be applied to all that is worn from head to foot. When you read "her dress was rich," or "her dress was inappropriate," you naturally take it to mean her entire apparel, not merely her gown or frock.

The word robe, which came into fashion the middle of the last century in this sense, is spoken of in 1862 as "a French mantua-makers' affectation." Correctly it is the apparel of kings and judges. Certainly this word hardly fits the sort of dress that women wear nowadays. It implies something rather stately and flowing.

Gown was revived as the term for a woman's dress a little after "robe." It has the advantage of having been used in much the same sense at an early period. However, like "robe" it sometimes conveys a sense of dignity and an emblem of office.

Frock somehow seems to fill the bill better today than either gown

French flannel in one of the new warm red tones fashions this superlative chic frock. The collar is of self-material, as is also the band, which is stitched down the center of the blouse, and the applied plaits, at the top of which are tiny pockets. Narrow cuffs finish the long one-piece sleeves. Ribbon is suggested for the sash, or, if preferred, self-material may be substituted. Medium size requires 3½ yards 44-inch material.

WHERE IT STARTED

THE THEATRE
The first dramatic performances were given in inn-yards; the audience watched the play from the ground itself or stood in the balconies which led to the rooms on the different floors. When the yard was roofed over, the place became to all intents and purposes a modern theatre.

or robe. Originally frock was applied to the garment of a monk, and it is because of this that we use the term "unfrock" to indicate a clergyman's loss of rank.

WHICH WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

SALLY LEE, an attractive young public stenographer, returns to work after marriage.

TOM PORTER, a young real-estate salesman, to help pay him over a college period, the couple, her excess, they quarrel, and she gets a job in a fashionable hotel in Atlantic City where she meets

ELLIOT DANE, a former acquaintance.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT

XXIII—REGRETS

WHEN Sally and Robert returned from the police station at the pier escorted by Elliot Dane, it was later than Sally had ever been out before. And still she felt a little shy to stay up a little longer.

"Come on, Sally," he heard as Robert yawned. "It's a pretty night, isn't it?"

"Yes, it is," she said, and found a chair in the hall.

"There is sure to be some one somewhere. They stay up for the late cabaret trade. Then you can ride up and down and breathe this glorious sea air and talk. It has been so long since I have seen you, Sally, please."

It was pleasant to have someone so attentive to her, even to yield to her every wish. She turned back against the cushions of the chair and closed her eyes. How glorious it would be if it were Tom here at her side!

Elliot Dane looked down at the provocative little figure beside him; her eyes were closed, her winsome mouth had the suggestion of a pout in its childish curves.

Suddenly, he slid his arm around behind her and crushed her to him, kissing her passionately.

With all her strength Sally pulled away from him but she was powerless.

"Oh please, please," she sobbed as he released her for a moment, "let me go. Take me home."

He smiled at her indulgently. "Don't be afraid of me. I just pretend that you're surprised. No one could help kissing those sweet little lips of yours."

"Oh please, please," Sally begged of him, the tears streaming down her cheeks and a hysterical note-like sob breaking her voice, "I can't bear it."

He released her from his arms, and she sank back limp against the cushions.

"Why you're just a child, aren't you? Don't be foolish, Sally. No one is going to hurt you. I just wanted to be nice to you. You're so sweet and beautiful I couldn't resist kissing you."

Honeyed phrases meant to make Sally feel ashamed of her reticence. But she only felt humiliated and ashamed at having this stranger touch her. As soon as they reached the hotel, she dashed in and up to her room without even saying "Good-night," and there she stared nervously watching the door, wondering what she would do.

TRINITY AND SHASTA CO. RESIDENTS PICNIC

The Trinity and Shasta county annual picnic was held at Mosswood park, Oakland, on Sunday, with approximately 100 former residents of the counties, but now living about the bay in attendance. A large delegation was present from Richmond and they reported that a wonderful day had been spent by all. Each family took their own basket lunch, which was greatly enjoyed under the shady trees of the park.

The day was somewhat marred by an accident. During a slight windstorm, a limb broke from a tree, injuring three people. They were Mrs. Smitherton of Shasta county, and Field Mooran and Mr. Ellis of Trinity county. Mooran was the most seriously injured, he having two stitches taken in a gash in his forehead. All were treated at the Merritt hospital.

With several hundred participants in attendance an open air mass was held on the grounds of St. Joseph's church. The mass was followed by a luncheon served by the Y. L. I. of Pinole.

Fortunately the rain held off until the starting of the initiation, which the two lodges held separately. It was one of the biggest initiations in history of the organization. A new lodge was instituted at Pinole at the same time. With the Syncop Six furnishing the music a big ball was held on Saturday evening with many Richmond people in attendance.

At the weekly meeting of the Boys' Hi-Y club of the Y. M. C. A. held at the Y clubhouse last night, officers to guide the club during the next term were elected as follows: President Russell King; vice-president, Everett Titterton; secretary, Robert Fenix; treasurer, George Johnson. The following were named heads of the committees: Louis Albert, service; William Abbey, program; Lawrence Ramey, service and Paul Bashan, music.

During the meeting plans were discussed for the annual co-ed party. It was decided to hold it on next Wednesday night, but further than that nothing was done. Elaborate preparation will be started today for the affair and it is planned to put it over big as the boys believe that they might just as well enjoy themselves on this day as not because the "co-ed party" comes but once an annum.

"Broken Barriers" At The Richmond

The most lively and best acted film that has been seen in a long time, was the verdict of the audience last night at the Richmond theatre at the opening of Reginald Barker's new production from Metro—"Broken Barriers," taken from the novel by Meredith Nicholson.

This story, which was adapted to the screen by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgins, deals with the divorce question and its relation to the younger generation and rises to great heights of dramatic effectiveness.

The wonderful cast included such star players as James Kirkwood, Mae Busch, Adolphe Menjou, Norma Shearer, George Fawcett, Robert Frazier, Ruth Stonehouse, Winifred Bryson, Robert Agnew, Vera Reynolds and others. "Broken Barriers" is a Louis B. Mayer presentation through Metro.

Other features on the same program include "Water Wagons," a Mack Sennett comedy; "Scraps and Troubles," a Sportlight subject.

Coming tomorrow, Ellnor Glynn's immortal romance "Three Weeks," featuring Conrad Nagel and Aileen Pringle.

New Lives For Old At The California

Paramount Picture
"New Lives for Old"

They're offering "New Lives for Old," at the California theatre for the last time tonight.

It's Betty Compson's newest Paramount starring picture directed by Clarence Badger and featuring Wallace McDonald, Theodore Kosloff and Sheldon Lewis in principal roles.

Betty's role is that of a girl of dual personality, a French dancer who spends her off time as a peasant girl on a little farm in Normandy.

Back in Paris, Betty becomes acquainted with a member of the French Intelligence Department who induces her to use her influence over "Major" de Montclair (Kosloff) to learn something of his secret dealings. He develops that de Montclair is really an enemy spy and it is up to Betty to "bet the goods on him." This she proceeds to do and later learns that she has saved the division of the man she loves.

The scene then shifts to America with Warren and Betty happily married. The girl is introduced to a French nobleman, engaged to Hugh's sister. He proves to be de Montclair, whose return from the past is full of menace for Olympe. She is unable to give the lie to his false account of their former acquaintance and must by her husband's momentary doubt and the hostile attitude of the Senator and Mrs. Warren, is about to leave the house, when Bert, the secret service agent, opportunely appears and paves the way for a happy ending.

There's an air of mystery running all through "New Lives for Old." It is undoubtedly Betty's best picture to date.

Other features on the same program include "Don't Park There," a Will Rogers comedy; "Earth Od duties," a Hodge Podge; Larry Canelo at the organ.

A Richmond billboard has been substituted for the big board of a large the company, advertising Oakland at the San Pablo creek bridge, according to officials of the chamber of commerce. This old sign has been standing for several years, and for the last year the chamber has been trying to secure a change. Word was received yesterday from New York that the board would be repainted to read:

"Richmond, 2 miles from here, Richmond, when settled in 1902, because of its strategic location upon San Francisco Bay and its deep water harbor, reaped into a city overnight, winning the sobriquet of 'The Pittsburgh of the West.'"

THE STORY THUS FAR

With plenty of time and money at her disposal Leonora Bessley decides to have a "fling." An attachment has sprung up between Leo and Richard Valoran, a musician, who came from the war more wounded in spirit than body. She discloses her intention of meeting Valoran to her best friend, Susan Murray, who was horrified at the idea.

Anyway, Leo crosses the channel to Calais where her lover is waiting, and they make off for a holiday in Switzerland together.

CHAPTER III

Leo and Val had possessed that magic gift for turning ordinary events into adventure, ordinary situations into humor—a gift that keeps the heart young, and is born with one, not acquired. Happiness does not bubble up within their hearts as a spring forming streams, down which they and all those around them are gaily whirled; it is a placid dipping into other wells of approved and conventional design.

The remainder of the journey to the "beautiful place" consisted in rapturous reminiscences. Every past incident was raked back from dead ashes into life again. To the tune of "Do you remember?"

"Thanks." She laughed softly. "I quite thought it was a joke!" But he had turned away again, and was gazing with extraordinary intensity at the water. She glanced at his profile, knowing well his quick changes of mood; then she surrendered herself once more to the scene unfolding at each turn. . . . Later, the flaccid drew up at an old chalet, whose dark wooden walls were nearly hidden by wisteria and clematis. It was a small hotel or pension, managed by a Frenchwoman widowed in the war. They had only time to change and hurry down to dinner, where, none of the other visitors being English, they found themselves in a peculiarly delightful state of isolation at their little table. Val's silent mood quickly changed to one of reckless vivacity. He concocted outrageous stories about everybody within his line of vision, and met their admiring glances with his infectious, sidelong little smile. Leo kicked his foot each time.

"You look like Mephistopheles without his cloak! Val, how did you hear of such a perfect little place?"

"From my 'Isolde.' She spent her honeymoon here."

"Do they know who you are?"

"No. Who am I? My secretary fixed it all up. He is discretion personified."

"Then—if they don't know you, why does everybody stare—Oh, long windows near their table. She lifted her head and breathed in deep wafts of scented air. "Glad-eye missing this morning, Val! What's up?"

"Nothing. I slept badly. What shall we do today?"

"Today we really begin. Yesterday was only the introduction—the overture, to use words you will understand."

"I have a larger vocabulary."

"The curtain is up, and the opera now commences. Audience is therefore requested to cough. Do you ever feel nervous at that point, Val?"

"When the audience coughs?"

"Oh, yes, yes—you hopeless idiot!"

Val had come downstairs with the brisk determination of a man who has himself well in hand, but is fatally conscious of the fact. At the unconscious irony of her question, he laughed.

"I do. Very—sometimes. What shall be the first scene?"

"Let's just ramble all day as we used to do. And let's be utterly senseless, as we used to be. There is a grain of sense in your eye, this morning, which is unfamiliar. Kindly expunge it."

"As we used to be!" he echoed, looking across at the radiant, un-kissed figure in its white frock. "If we could only go back to it all."

His tone caused her to open wide eyes of surprise. "But we are back! That's just the joy of—this. What is the matter? Have you remembered an unpaid bill? You were forgetting them, and having . . ."

"That's it," he interrupted bitterly. "The same old unpaid bill. One mistake—and the bill hangs round one's neck for the rest of life in this—this damned world you think so good."

He pushed back his chair, ignoring her cry of protest, and felt in his pockets for his cigarettes. "Let's start, shall we? I want to walk—keep moving. . . . Are you ready?"

Leo finished her coffee, then got up. "I'll see about the lunch."

"Oh—must we bother?"

With Leo, the realization of a wrong was merely the preliminary to righting it. The inertia which causes so many people to sit still under fortune's knocks, and turn the other cheek, filled her with impatience. Two years ago, this "bill" had been merely irksome to Val. Now, she perceived it to have become intolerable.

As they entered the pine wood near the hotel, she thrust her arm through his. "Old boy—why do you stick it?" she asked impulsively. "Can't you rid—can't you get free?"

He kicked a fir-cone away with an impatient foot. "No; or do you think I'd hesitate? She doesn't want freedom. This—pays her better. And she has adopted the lonely woman pose—misunderstood, tied to an actor—rotter. You know the stunt? It's very telling."

Leo gave a surge of rage. "It is so very unfair."

He laughed mirthlessly. "I suppose there is no such thing as freedom in this life. If we are not shackled in one way, we are in another. And the worst shackles of all are those to our own cursed selves. I'm only dreading my—what's it called?—weird. That's all."

"But you didn't know! You didn't know! You did what seemed right, at the time. That is what's so unfair. If—if you had been—if you had acted dishonorably, instead of marrying, you would have escaped all this. So—where is the justice?"

"Where is it often, Leo? We know we do wrong, and we escape. We think we do right, and are made to suffer. It's one of those mysteries one can't adjust. We are supposed to say, 'It is our own fault; we ought to have known.' Damn it all! How can we know? Might as well blame a kitten for falling into a well, before the fates opened its eyes."

This outburst was exactly to Leo's mind. "And no chance given to set things right! That is the cruellest injustice of all."

"The only chance of righting things is to do more wrong," he remarked. "Funny; isn't it?" He glanced down at her head so near his arm. "That chance rests with me."

"With—you?" She looked up in some perplexity.

He nodded, watching her face. "If—if I—give her cause for a divorce, she might—"

A choking exclamation from Leo caused him to break off. She loosed his arm and stood quite still in the woodland path, with an expression of horror, almost a recoil, in her eyes.

"You! You! Oh! Never—never—never! Whatever happens, Val, not—that."

"I—I couldn't bear it." Her words were barely audible; in them were the sound of tears—the first tears he had ever heard there.

The trees roared through meadows thick with flowers. At last Leo uttered a cry.

"Snow!" she gasped. "There they are!"

Val thrust his head out too, and joined in her welcome to the giants of the Oberland. After a time, Leo lifted her face and sniffed. "Smell the pines," she cried. "Isn't it lush? And look at those fluffy little clouds chasing each other round that mountain—ah! the tiny one will reach the top first. Damn! We are going round a corner—I must see if it gets up."

Val seized her by the shoulders, and pulled her back to the seat at his side. "You will be off in one yourself in a minute," he observed. "When you were a kiddie, did you ever imagine that the souls of people who died went away in the clouds?"

"No. Why? Did you?"

He nodded, laughing. "Same sort of notion as the stork and babies."

Val had fallen unusually silent; but this did not surprise Leo, owing to her own state of ecstatic rapture having become too chronic for adequate words. After the first mile or so, she broke the silence without hesitation.

"Would you mind very much telling me the name of this lake? Just for the sake of my geography. If you happen to know it yourself, of course!"

He started; then seemed to take a mental grip of something, as a man grips the rail of a ship that is swaying unsteadily. "Looking down upon the one woman in all the world, alone at last with him in the midst of this intoxicating beauty, he bit his lip rather fiercely before trusting his voice."

"Thin," he replied briefly, "Lake Thun."

Leo's state of ecstatic excitement calmed down a little after a night's rest. But she greeted Val with shining eyes and beaming face next morning.

"Faintly British!" she sighed, sitting down for breakfast in a blaze of sunshine. "But I hate crumbs round my toes in bed." A lilac tree bloomed just outside the Val, stop giving the glad eye to that fat Italian!"

"They think we are honeymooners. I'm only playing up. Why don't you look as if you adored me?" He laid his hand over hers on the table. "Carissima!"

"Lunatic!" She drew away, with a giggle at his expression. "You once told me I possessed a hard nut instead of a heart."

He bent over his plate with a gleam in his eyes. "There will be the deuce to pay—for somebody—some day—"

"Curse! I've swallowed an orange pip. Hope it doesn't grow."

He waved his wine-glass aloft. "Here's to—"

"Our meeting, Val?"

"The cracking of the nut!"

This time she saw the gleam in the eyes that met her own. They were blue-black tonight as the sky in London when the violinist played. A little of the same joy in beauty stirred her heart and glowed in her face.

After dinner they strolled down a path between pastures to the margin of the lake. Leo thrust her hand through Val's arm. "It's as if we are being given a glimpse of a different world up there, isn't it? And all the other world we know is shut away."

"The World of the Immortals," he murmured, pressing her arm close.

Officers claim to have seized two bottles of liquor at Sewell's cabin. Barnanan was arrested when he entered the place which officers were raiding.

Other civic betterments and activities will follow, for Richmond will have realized for the first time its own tremendous power of accomplishment.

LONG HAVE WE PREACHED COMMUNITY CO-OPERATION

But the time for words is now passed, the time for ACTION IS HERE. During the next few weeks the citizens of this community will be put to test. We will be given the opportunity to show whether we are ready for community co-operation, for the erection of Richmond's new, distinctive Hotel, will, in the strictest sense, be a community effort.

LET US UNITE IN THE COMMON CAUSE OF RICHMOND

Unite in making Richmond an attractive place for the thousands of annual visitors—unite in building our distinctive Community Hotel which will be the real civic center for social, fraternal and business gatherings.

The New Hotel will contain about seventy-five guest rooms, a public dining room, a Coffee Shop, Club dining room, attractive lobby and lounge, together with several shops on the ground floor. Economy of operation and construction will be given every consideration.

7 per cent Cumulative Preferred stock and common stock no par value are to be sold. Your investment will be represented by brick and steel erected in the heart of a rapidly growing city. Your investment will answer the ever growing demand for a modern hotel in Richmond. Your investment will be operated by an experienced and successful hotel operator who has a chain of well known hotels.

Let us be united—united in making a bona fide business investment which will greatly aid in promoting the advancement and welfare of Richmond, one that will put Richmond ON THE MAP IN THE TOURIST WORLD.

FROM NOW ON UNTIL OUR NEW HOTEL IS ACTUALLY ASSURED, LET US PULL TOGETHER IN THE INTEREST OF RICHMOND AND THE NEW HOTEL.

While they were attending the ball game at Emeryville Sunday, Lester O'Brien, 601 Bissell avenue, and L. P. Outman, 325 Forty-fourth street, had their cars, both Chevrolets, stolen, according to reports made to the Oakland and Richmond police.

Pullman Team
Wins Two Games

With the rain taking in sheets on the first street park Sunday the Pullman club defeated the Del Monte No. 6 team of Oakland by a score of 3 to 0 in a game that had to be called at the first of the fifth. The Pullmans made their first tally in the first and their other two in the second when Sherrard, heavy hitter, scored Jacobson and himself on a circuit clout. The Pullmans will play Concord here next Sunday.

At the San Pablo Park on Sunday, the Pullmans walloped the Street and Pipe company nine, 6 to 5.

The game was scheduled in the Oakland Industrial league. With the score standing 5 to 3 against them the Pullmans pulled a rally in the ninth and draged down the victory.

Yountville Beats

McRackens Sunday

Fighting in the mud and much of the field and battling valiantly in the downpour of rain the W. S. McRackens found themselves at the small end of a 7 to 6 score in the game with Yountville at Yountville on Sunday. Due to the bad condition of the field errors were frequent and quite often the combatants found themselves going into nose dives and tail spins.

Tabbot was started on the mound by Manager Snowden of McRackens but he was later relieved by "Red" Gaderby, who pitched some nice ball. The McRackens back stop was Van Arsdale. Figeriedo was the heavy hitter of the day with a three bagger.

Richmond Keys

Bow to Albany

Before the onslaught of the Albany Merchants, The Richmond Keys went down to a 4 to 3 defeat on Sunday at Albany. The game was fast and tight after the first inning when the Albanyans scored three runs off Neylon and the trolleyman made one of Brown. Theother two tallied for Tex Brown's cohorts came in the second and third. Greenway replaced Neylon after the first and Neylon caught thence forward. Greenway allowed but one run but that was just one too many. Greenway and Neylon each made three hits.

The delegates were Ben Warrington and George Stanley.

WEEK-END BURGLAR OPERATES

Feichtner, 149 South Seventeenth street over the week-end and pilfered a 34 automatic revolver and a flashlight both of which are valued at $37.50. Merchants Meet
Firemen Today
If Rain Stops

The Firemen and the Merchants were up until a late hour this morning scanning the barometer with a weather praying for sunshine today. At least until after their game with each other is finished.

Their efforts were of no avail, however, as both Ed Hill manager of the Merchants, and Chief W. P. Cooper, head of the fire eaters, declared that if the condition of the field will possibly admit of such a thing the game will be played even though the whole Pacific ocean is poured upon the heads of the combatants during the game.

The managers should worry how much it rains, however, as they can find cover beneath the bleachers, while their charges can paddle around in the open.

TUBERCULOSIS OVERCOME

Oakland, Calif.
April 28, 1925.
For about three years I suffered from a bad cough and sore throat. I tried many doctors, all of whom pronounced my case Tuberculosis. My spirit was examined and showed tubercular germs. As I found no improvement from any of the treatments that I took, I decided to give the FONG WAN HERB a test, as a last resort.

After having drunk the herbs for four months, I was a well woman and had gained in weight. A year has elapsed since I began to take the FONG WAN HERB on April 15, 1924, but today, I am still well and have no sign of my former complaints.

BELT RAILWAY EXTENDED TO FERRY BUILDING

J. N. Asmussen, manager of Blake Brothers quarry announced that at the instigation of Blake Brothers, and the Richmond Belt Railway, a sum in the neighborhood of $50,000 is being expended to construct a rail line from the Richmond-San Rafael Ferry to connect with the belt line at Winehaven.

It is expected that the work will be completed within five months as the project has already been started, with the blasting done and shovel work to be started within ten days, Asmussen said. The installation of 8600 feet of rail will be required for the new line.

The loop around Point San Pablo will be completed with the construction of this line, thereby opening additional industrial area of possible development, notably what is known as Shrimp camp.

Trial of Heir

passes on the man as a prospective juror.

SIGNS OF CONTEST

The state's further questions and the signs of a bitter contest on the part of the defense, as the replies of each juror were taken down by William Scott Stewart, shepherd's attorney, and indicated that the task of completing the jury will prove an arduous one. It may take all of three weeks, as Assistant State's Attorney Gorman predicts, or the twelve men may be chosen in a week as the defense believes.

The state submitted a last minute list of witnesses, including Dr. S. J. Breidman, a chemist of Battle Creek, Mich.; Louis Shabaro, Leola Allard, a newspaper reporter; Dr. Ludwig Hektoren, toxicologist; Eva Nelson, and Marie Gardner, cook and nurse, respectively in the Shepherd household.

"Dr." Charles C. Faiman, head of the National School of Sciences and indicted with Shepherd for the germ slaying of the young millionaire, was granted a separate trial today. Faiman is the state's main witness and is expected to relate the details of the plot in which Shepherd enlisted his aid to obtain typhoid germs for administration in food to young McClinton, so that after his death Shepherd might become heir to the million dollar estate. For his share in the execution of the plot, Faiman is to testify, $100,000 was promised him.

Faiman, a biologist, admitted instructing Shepherd in the use of typhoid cultures, their preservation and administration, and finally obtained a supply from an acquaintance in the Chicago health department laboratory, ostensibly for use in his bacteriological school. These germs he gave to Shepherd and Shepherd in turn gave them to his unsuspecting ward, Faiman will testify.

DEATH FOLLOWS WILL

The death of the 21 year old millionaire so soon after making his will and announcing his engagement to Miss Isabelle Pope, his childhood sweetheart, aroused the suspicion of Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court. His investigation resulted in the indictment of Shepherd by the grand jury for the death of McClinton.

Mrs. Mattie Chandler, W. W. Scott and John I. Collins, were officially declared elected to serve six years on the city council, dating from July 1, 1925. Certificates of election were ordered. Official tellers appointed by Mayor J. H. Plate were Councilmembers Garrard, Osborn, Scholes, Black and Scott.

The graves of Young McClinton, his mother, and the brother of Judge Olson, were opened to seek further possible traces of poisoning. Young McClinton was found to have died of typhoid fever as the death certificate showed. Mrs. Emma Nelson McClinton was found to have died of mercurial poisoning administered before she left Texas, sixteen years ago, according to the chemist's report. No trace of poison was discovered in the body of Dr. Oscar Olson.

Whether the state will prove its contention that it was Shepherd who administered the typhoid germs to Billy McClinton and caused his death is the issue in the trial which opened today.

Blood is Poisoned By a Torpid Liver

Deadly toxins cause diseases of heart, kidneys and create premature old age

All the blood in our bodies passes through the liver every 15 minutes. The liver is the blood's purifier.

Our blood is constantly poisoned by body toxins formed in food waste, and when the liver becomes weak or torpid, our systems are at once tainted by impure blood. These are the poisons that, if not destroyed by the liver, cause diseases of the heart, kidneys, blood vessels and create premature old age.

Nature gives quick warning of a torpid liver. You have sudden sick headaches, dizzy spells; your stomach is acid from sour bile, your skin turns sallow, blotchy.

Doctors know the liver cannot be regulated by drugs, but a safe Nature substance has been discovered which will act directly on the liver. The discovery is purified ox gall.

Get from your druggist a package of Dioxol. Each tablet contains ten drops of purified ox gall. In 24 hours the poison toxins will be removed. Your liver will be regulated. Blood purification will begin. Sallow skin will clear. You will feel so much better you will know you have found the cause of your ill health.

These genuine ox gall tablets are prepared only under the name "Dioxol." If any tablet is offered you under another name, refuse it. Accept only Dioxol in the original, genuine package. Test Dioxol free. Mail this coupon now.
